MISCELLANEOUS READING. An attempt was made a few years ago to pers as a substitute for the constantly recurring phrase "telegraph dispatch." The word seemed to strike most writers as awkward with the actual evidences of property, report as and fell into disuse, even among those who attempted the innovation. The convenience. however, of having some single word to express what is transmitted by the telegraph, as distinguished from the instrument by which it is sent, has led to an attempt to revive the word and bring it into general use. The London Times constantly uses it of late, and is imitated by its namesake on this side of the water, the New York Times. The London Inquirer gives an amusing account word. Although the word follows the analogy of diagram, anagram, and one or two other words, the greater part of the words in our language of the same Greek derivation terminate in "graph." Thus we have photograph, (not photogram, which would be exeerable,) paragraph, autograph, etc. But it seems not improbable that the great convenience of the word will overcome all the repugnance which is felt to it on the score of taste, and that it will come into current use. The public will at length become reconciled to it, as it has to ladies' hoops, which were so pitilessly ridiculed at first. The best rule in relation to new words (as also in regard to new fashions in dress) is that given by Pope in the "Essay on Criticism:" "Be not the first by whom the new is tried, Nor yet the last to lay the old aside. Nat. Int.

A country gentleman who has lived near us so long that he might pass for a native of these digginge, although he was born near-TISH WHARF FOR RENT AT PUBLIC or you than me, was obliged to visit your city on business, a few weeks ago, in the midst of the panic. He took quarters at a boarding house, and his rustic dress and appearance exposed him to the observation and remark of a smart young lady, of very uncertain age, who cat opposite to him at the dinner table. Taking him for a decidedly verdant son of the soil, she proceeded to quiz him at her leisure. The gentleman perceived her drift, and he humored the joke. In the course of her inquiries she asked-

"Did you ever visit our great city before? "Yes ma'am, I did, several years since?" "Did you come by railroad or steamboat in

"Neither of them things was in use when I came to town." 'You must have come by stage?" "Not exactly that way neither." "In a wheelbarrow, perhaps?"

'No, not that way neither." "You must have come on foot?" "Not exactly, so ma'am." "Well, how then did you come-do tell us?" "Well, if you must know, I was born here, June 24, 1814, at No. 40 Walker street, near
